

Abstract

The disclosed invention relates to the use of a volcanic rock mined from an unwelded ash flow tuff to remove toxic metals from contaminated aqueous solutions. The material adsorptive properties can also be enhanced using a combination of zero valent iron, oxidized iron derivatives and activated carbon to create a binding system.